TRAGEDY IN ARIZONA

INVESTIGATORS PROBE DEATHS OF 19 FIREFIGHTERS

Reuters

PRESCOTT, Ariz. Fire investigators in central Arizona launched a probe Monday into how wind-driven flames closed in on and killed 19 specially trained firemen in a tragedy that marked the greatest loss of life among firefighters in a U.S. wildland blaze in 80 years.

The precise circumstances surrounding Sunday's deaths of all but one of a 20-member elite "hotshots" firefighting team remained unclear a day after they perished while battling a blaze that has destroyed scores of homes and forced the evacuation of two towns.

But fire officials said the young men fell victim to a volatile mix of erratic winds gusting to gale-force intensity, low humidity, a sweltering heat wave, and thick, drought-parched brush that had not burned in some 40 years.

The doomed firefighters had managed to deploy their personal fire shelters, tent-like safety devices designed to deflect heat and trap breathable air, in a last-ditch effort to survive that proved futile, officials said.

Peter Andersen, a former local Fire District chief who assisted in the early firefighting efforts, told Reuters some of the men on the ground made it into their shelters and some did not, according to an account relayed by a ranger helicopter crew flying over the area.

"There was nothing [the helicopter crew] could do to get to them," he said.

Still, conditions faced by the "hotshots," a ground crew that fights flames at close range with hand tools and serves as the shock troops in a firefighting force, were typical for the wildfires they are trained to battle, fire officials said.

Standard safety protocols followed by such crews appeared to be in place, and investigators are trying to determine exactly what went wrong in this instance, they said.

"It had to be a perfect storm in order for this to happen. Their situational awareness and their training was at such a high level that it's unimaginable that this has even happened," Prescott Fire Department spokesman Wade Ward said.

Obama: They were heroes

Los Angeles Times

The deaths of 19 firefighters battling a wildland blaze in central Arizona on Sunday will go down as one of the worst firefighter losses in modern U.S. history, and officials already were honoring their deaths.

President Obama, traveling in Africa, issued the following statement a few hours after the firefighters' deaths near Yarnell, Ariz.:

"Yesterday, 19 firefighters were killed in the line of duty while fighting a wildfire outside Yarnell, Ariz. They were heroes—highly skilled professionals who, like so many across our country do every day, selflessly put themselves in harm's way to protect the lives and property of fellow citizens they would never meet.

"In recent days, hundreds of firefighters have battled extremely dangerous blazes across Arizona and the Southwest. The federal government is already assisting, and we will remain in close contact with state and local officials to provide the support they need.

"But today, Michelle and I join all Americans in sending our thoughts and prayers to the families of these brave firefighters and all whose lives have been upended by this terrible tragedy."

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

tswartz@tribune.com
@tracyswartz

It's farmers market season in Chicago, and some of these markets are conveniently located next to CTA stations.

Last week, the city debuted two new night markets near the Logan Square Blue Line and Argyle Red Line stops to supplement the farmers markets that operate during days.

Going Public tells you how to get from the CTA line to the check-out line.

A full list of markets is available at chicago.metromix.com.

Brown Line

About 20 vendors sell goods—including cheese, crepes and pastries—at the Lincoln Square Ravenswood Farmers Market in a lot by the Western stop. There's a market that runs from 4-8 p.m. Thursdays, and one that operates from 7 a.m.-1 p.m. Tuesdays.

The Low-Line Market in Lakeview uses the space under the Brown Line tracks next to the Southport stop. The market, which offers fresh fruit and cream puffs, is from 4-8 p.m. Thursdays.

Red Line

Saturdays are a good time for shoppers along the Red Line. The Division Street Farmers Market near the Clark/Division stop on the Gold Coast and the Printers Row Farmers Market near the Harrison stop in the South Loop both run from 7 a.m.-1 p.m.

Blue Line

Three stops from the Logan Square market is the Wicker Park Bucktown market, which offers dairy, meat and jewelry, near the Damen stop from 8 a.m.-2 p.m. Sundays.

Green Line

The Garfield Park Conservatory, near the Conservatory-Central Park Drive stop in East Garfield Park, offers a farmers market 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Sundays in its parking lot. Market activities include cooking demos and outdoor garden strolls.

Farther west on the Green Line by the Central stop is the Austin Town Hall market, which runs 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Thursdays. The market made its debut last year.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Damen Brown Line

The best seats at the Damen Brown Line stop in Ravenswood aren't on the platform or even on the train. They're in the stationhouse by the turnstiles. Benches and chairs are made of vintage suitcases so the art, made by New York artist Ron Baron, is both functional and beautiful. If only the rest of the CTA could be that way.

BEST-WORST OF THE GOOGLE GRAVEYARD

Google announced back in March it would retire the (seemingly) popular Google Reader RSS feed service on July 1, due to a decline in usage. Groans were heard 'round the Internet, and eulogies were shared. But this isn't really a new thing—Google has been churning out, and then shutting down, new products and services like clockwork for years.

Wordstream.com put together a list of Google products that eventually ended up in the Google graveyard—and it's a long one. Here are a few of our favorite massive Google bombs you may (or may not) remember.

JESSICA GALLIART IS REDEYE'S SOCIAL MEDIA LADY.

GOOGLE ANSWERS 2002-2006

"Knowledge market" competitor to Yahoo! Answers, but significantly less funny.

GOOGLE LIVELY 2008-2008

Basically, the early '00s was Google's "Let's just throw a bunch of resources at copying every semi-popular Web product available" era. This one was a copy of Second Life, with avatars, chat bubbles and sad people.

GOOGLE WAVE 2009-2012

This was supposed to be a new communication platform that allowed for real-time editing among groups and blended elements of email, instant messaging, etc. But, really, nobody really knew what the hell to do with Google Wave.

GOOGLE BUZZ 2010-2011

What a mess this one was. Trying to compete with Facebook, Google launched this social service to combine and share all of your social media activity with the world and almost immediately got hit with massive privacy lawsuits.

Also, nobody really knew what the hell to do with it.

HYDE PARK
MAKEOVER

New businesses rolling into a 'hood with history

By Rachel Cromidas | REDEYE

When Trushar Patel opened Rajun Cajun in a small storefront on East 53rd Street 22 years ago, it was one of the South Side's first Indian restaurants.

Since then, his neighborhood, Hyde Park-Kenwood, has experienced many firsts, chief among them the election of Barack Obama, a local homeowner, as president of the United States.

This year, Patel has had a front-row view of the largest urban redevelopment efforts the neighborhood has ever seen, ushering in brand-name chain shops including Akira, Five Guys and, soon, Whole Foods.

While Hyde Park has always been known for its independent stores, coffee shops and bookish residents, many locals complain that it lacks the kinds of shopping and entertainment options that draw people to a neighborhood and make them stay. But the lakefront community, home to thousands of University of Chicago students and employees and bordered by some of Chicago's most embattled neighborhoods, is in the midst of a major makeover that could change that image.

A movie theater opened on 53rd Street earlier this year, following a Five Guys, an Akira and a Clarke's—the only 24-hour diner for miles. By the end of 2013, developers say, 53rd Street will have a Hyatt Place Hotel, a concert venue and a new University of Chicago office building as well. The redevelopment is being aided by the University of Chicago, a major landowner, and city tax increment financing funds.

After an outcry from Hyde Parkers over the size of one new development project on 53rd Street this spring, the developers agreed to reduce its height and add more affordable apartment units.

Patel, a longtime Hyde Park resident who is on the neighborhood's TIF council, said he welcomes the commercial growth, even though the new stores may serve as competition.

"This glass building is going to bring 500 people working here, so the foot traffic up here is going to be very heavy," he said, gesturing toward the new office building that has gone up a few blocks east. "Change is always good."

Not everyone is celebrating Hyde Park's new commercial influences outright.

"I was really hoping that if they put in a new grocery store then it would be cheaper," said Emily Swafford, 30, a grad student. "One of the nice things about Hyde Park is that it has such a mix; it's mostly middle-class, but within middle class there's a range of incomes."

Hyde Park's relationship with the rest of the South Side is complicated. It is one of few neighborhoods south of the Loop with a range of independent boutique shops and grocers, making it something of an oasis in a food and retail desert. But those amenities likely wouldn't exist without the financial support of the university community and the University of Chicago. Hyde Park is considered by some a case study in racial and economic integration today, but race, class and town-gown tensions have undergirded most of the area's major residential and commercial changes over the past century.

Area crime rates have decreased over the past decade, according to Chicago Police data.

'HOOD WATCH

There's a lot to know about Hyde Park and the surrounding area before you go. Here's a cheat sheet of topics residents are talking about.

HEATHER CHARLES/TRIBUNE FILE

» The University of Chicago is a major community player, bringing thousands of students and employees to the neighborhood to live or work, and a driving force behind many redevelopment projects that have led to town-gown tensions. Those tensions came to a head most recently in April, when the university razed an apartment building that was home to Ronald Reagan for one year when he was a boy.

» A collection of contemporary art galleries and art museums make Hyde Park a cultural epicenter of the South Side. And a new nearby center for local artists, the Washington Park Arts Incubator, opened earlier this year, under the direction of South Side artist and University of Chicago administrator Theaster Gates.

» Hyde Park has been home to many influential power brokers. Case in point: President Obama, whose visits to his Kenwood home back up traffic.

Even when he isn't around, the Secret Service keep watch on his block, and they are not to be messed with; In December, a Chicago man was arrested for spitting inside an agent's car.

Hyde Park has had many new developments recently, including an Akira (left), Five Guys Burgers (above) and a multi-purpose building that will be a shopping, dining and entertainment hub in the neighborhood.

MIKE RICH/REDEYE PHOTOS

So far this year, Hyde Park has seen two homicides—separate shootings that took place blocks from the Obamas' Kenwood home and have received national attention. In 2012 the neighborhood logged one homicide, and in 2011 there were two.

Dee-Dee Collins-Jones, a neighborhood elementary school teacher, said she feels like Hyde Park is becoming safer as new storefronts attract more foot traffic to 53rd Street.

"Economic growth has been a concern for the South Side in general," she said. "To see more people strolling along here is nice."

For people looking to rent or own property in Hyde Park, the neighborhood offers a range of prices.

Rental units range from $600 for a small studio to $1,100 for a studio in a lakefront high-rise, according to Peter Cassel, the director of MAC Property Management. He said one-bedroom apartments rent from $900 to $1,700, and two-bedrooms start at $1,000.

Local realtors said property values in Hyde Park have increased slightly in recent years, alongside changes in the greater real estate market, and properties are moving more quickly than they used to.

But some condo units still are on the market for as low as $100,000, said Jeanne Spurlock, a realtor, while houses on the toniest blocks sell for $2.5 million or more.

Chef Matthias Merges said the sense of community cohesion he felt in Hyde Park made him want to open a restaurant there. He said he made plans to open two restaurants in the neighborhood, one of them an offshoot of Yusho, a popular Japanese street food concept in Avondale, after seeing the momentum behind other redevelopment projects.

"There's three things that count: where people live, where people play, and where people work, and I think those things are all starting to happen there," he said. "They're creating the amenities that people need to stay within their neighborhood, just like the North Side has, and it creates a great opportunity."

RCROMIDAS@TRIBUNE.COM | @RACHELCROMIDAS

» One prominent example of Hyde Park's many bookstores is the Seminary Co-op Bookstore, which once was known for its maze-like basement of wall-to-wall books. Last year the University of Chicago relocated the bookstore to a ground-level space a few blocks away.

» Harper Theater is Hyde Park's only multi-screen movie theater, but it isn't the only place to take in a flick. The student-run Doc Films movie theater, located seven blocks south, screens a mix of new releases and cult classics every week. Weekly series this spring included Japanese Underground Cinema from 1962 to 1974 and "Headbangersploitation: Heavy Metal on Film."

Sacred Heart Hospital abruptly shuts down

Chicago Tribune

The beleaguered Sacred Heart Hospital, whose owner faces federal charges in an alleged kickback and health care fraud scheme, abruptly shut down Monday.

The Illinois Department of Public Health received a phone call Monday informing officials that the hospital, 3240 W. Franklin Blvd., was closing, department spokeswoman Melaney Arnold said.

Arnold said the state requires 90-day notification of a hospital closure. She was uncertain what actions or sanctions might be sought, and said staff was dispatched to the hospital immediately to monitor the shut-down and transfer of patients.

"I don't know how many patients [are at the hospital]," Arnold said. "Our priority is the patients and making sure they are being cared for."

Sacred Heart owner Edward Novak is at the center of a federal probe that includes alleged kickbacks for patient referrals and a scheme to defraud Medicare and Medicaid. Six others, including five physicians, also are charged.

Among the most explosive charges made by federal investigators in court documents is that Sacred Heart physicians performed unnecessary procedures on patients, including tracheotomies.

By Saturday afternoon, it was clear that something wasn't right. With about a dozen patients left, said James Camacho, a lab technician who had worked at Sacred Heart for about five years, occupancy was the lowest he'd seen.

The mood inside Monday was "dry, dead and gloomy," he said.

Jackson sentencing delayed indefinitely

The sentencings of former Rep. Jesse Jackson Jr. and his wife, Sandi, were postponed Monday, with no new date set. The South Side Democrats had been scheduled to learn their fates Wednesday, until the delay was announced by U.S. District Judge Amy Berman Jackson, who is not related to the pair. A court spokesman said neither the prosecution nor defense asked for the postponement.

City reports drop in homicides

Chicago closed out the first six months of 2013 with the fewest homicides the city has seen in nearly half a century, police Superintendent Garry McCarthy said Monday. At a press conference at a West Side police station, McCarthy noted the significant reduction in homicides came after a bloody 2012 in which Chicago recorded more than 500 homicides for only the second time in a decade.

Teen convicted in beating death

A Chicago teen who allegedly took part in a vicious game known as "Pick 'Em Out and Knock 'Em Out" was found guilty Monday of murder and robbery charges in connection with the killing of a father of 12. Cook County Circuit Judge Joseph Claps convicted Anthony Malcolm, 19, saying he videotaped the attack on Delfino Mora, who was collecting cans in a West Rogers Park alley last July. TRIBUNE

Interest rates double on new student loans

WASHINGTON Students preparing to take subsidized government loans will see their interest rates double to 6.8 percent from current levels as of Monday.

But hope isn't lost yet. Lawmakers are working hard behind the scenes trying to strike a deal to save the 7 million college students who are slated to take the subsidized federal Stafford loans this year.

Senate Democratic leaders are throwing their weight behind a bill that would extend the 3.4 percent rates for another year, just as Congress did last year.

House Republicans have said they'd prefer a longer-term solution, like the one they passed back in April to keep rates low for now but rise along with market rates in the future.

"We're advising our schools to tell students that their subsidized Stafford interest rates are going to be 6.8 percent on July 1," said Justin Draeger, president of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

"I find it really frustrating that nothing is even being brought up, since Congress is now in recess," said Rachel McGovern, who will be a senior at University of Florida and will be taking out $5,500 in subsidized federal loans.

The higher rates that go into effect on July 1 only apply to new loans, such as McGovern's. These loans generally are awarded to only about a third of undergraduate students in financial need.

Snowden appeals to 15 countries

Military to Morsi: Learn to share

Egypt's armed forces handed Islamist President Mohammed Morsi a virtual ultimatum to share power on Monday, giving feuding politicians 48 hours to compromise or have the army impose its own road map for the country.

Zimmerman defense plays police tapes

On Monday, for the first time, jurors in the George Zimmerman trial heard from him about the events that led to Trayvon Martin's death on February 26, 2012. Tape of Zimmerman's retelling could bolster the defense's key contention: that Zimmerman reacted in self-defense.

THAW
NON-HOCKEY TEAMS
WANT YOUR ATTENTION, TOO

RedEye

We get it, you've been cozied up in a Blackhawks blanket for two months. It's been awesome, hasn't it? Well, now the dog days of summer are here. But while the Hawks were busy capturing the coolest trophy in sports, other Chicago teams were making headlines, too. Some were even intentional. Each team has given fans reasons to wake up and pay attention—or to hit snooze.

Jesse Crain
US PRESSWIRE

CUBS

Wake up: Fans don't have to worry about Carlos Marmol blowing games anymore; they designated him for assignment. They also beat the White Sox three times. Take that, South Siders!

Hit snooze: Alfonso Soriano and his $19 million salary are still with the team. Not to mention they're 35-45 and in fourth place in the NL Central.

WHITE SOX

Wake up: Reliever Jesse Crain set a franchise record with 29 straight scoreless appearances. Chris Sale is one of the best pitchers in baseball. He's got a sparkling 2.79 ERA and an intimidating 114 strikeouts.

Hit snooze: They're 32-47 and in last place in the AL Central division. Adam Dunn is terrible—again. Paul Konerko is hurt. So is Jake Peavy. They can't hold a lead. OK, we'll stop now.

FIRE

Wake up: Since Mike Magee was acquired from the L.A. Galaxy, he's played four games in Chicago—and scored four goals. The Fire also are 3-0-2 in their past five MLS contests.

Hit snooze: Because of a miserable start, the Fire (5-7-3) still are two points out of a playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. Keep at it, fellas.

SKY

Wake up: The Sky (7-3) have won three straight, are second in the East, and Elena Delle Donne is on fire. The forward was named WNBA Rookie of the Month for June and leads the team in scoring (19.5 points per game).

Hit snooze: This team still struggles when point guard and second-leading scorer Epiphanny Prince is not in the lineup. If she gets hurt again or abducted by aliens, it'll be tough for the Sky to make the playoffs.

BEARS

Wake up: Jay Cutler and Kristin Cavallari got married! No, they did not exchange vows via text message. They also released their honeymoon pictures! You can see them on Twitter (@KristinCav). Thanks, Kristin!

Hit snooze: Fullback Evan Rodriguez got arrested for DUI, and the Bears released him. They also traded first-round bust Gabe Carimi. Plus, Brian Urlacher still is retired, and training camp doesn't start for three weeks.

BULLS

Wake up: They drafted players who can shoot: Tony Snell from New Mexico and Erik Murphy from Florida. Derrick Rose should love passing to those guys on the perimeter.

Hit snooze: Uh, Rose still hasn't said when he's coming back. Preseason games begin in three months. Cross your fingers.

THE STARTING LINE

NO TEARS

Be strong, Chicago. Even with Dave Bolland gone, we still have a Stanley Cup title to celebrate.

1	If you were the Stanley Cup, what would be your No. 1 stop in Chicago?	Stanley's Vegetables in Bucktown. This city's not big enough for the two of us ...	He's from out of town? Navy Pier.	This cool bar in Englewood where nobody will notice me.	Wrigleyville. It'd be nice for them to see what a trophy looks like.	Someplace I could put one of those margaritas-with-the-beer-tipped-in-it-things into my cup.
2	What will you miss most about Dave Bolland?	His musk.	The Dave Bolland trade rumors.	He just had a way, right when a party was about to be over, of letting us know what a great player he is.	How he used to annoy the Canucks. And their fans. And their media. And (bawls uncontrollably) ...	Uh ... hmm ... umm, hey that was some parade, huh?!
3	No Chicago sports teams played Monday. How'd you cope?	Cope? Do you know which teams are left playing?	Not too bad. Called my ex-girlfriend nine times.	Walked though Rush Street and Wrigleyville mostly unannoyed.	Hot tea, warm blanket, Joni Mitchell's "Blue" on repeat, and my own tears.	"Keeping Up With the Kardashians" reruns.
4	How should Paul Konerko treat his injured back?	Have the guy who fixed Bruce Wayne punch him in it.	Like he wants to be treated.	Lots of rest and alone time during the games at U.S. Cellular.	Don't watch White Sox baseball. Back will mysteriously heal itself.	Icy Hot and Jameson.
5	How would you entice Dwight Howard to sign with the Bulls?	Promise him a trade for Kobe, too.	Really hype the Rainforest Cafe.	Hey Dwight, we have plenty of nurseries and diaper stations where you can take your talents, crybaby!	Pacifier, blanket, and warm milk.	Have him take the Stanley Cup out for the night and let him catch the championship vapors.

It's good to have options. Um, right?

Ben Johnson

» redeyesports@tribune.com
» @thbenjo

I'm trying to read the tea leaves about the Bulls, and it's not easy:

Our dear Bullies took small forward Tony Snell out of New Mexico and power forward Erik Murphy out of Florida in the NBA draft, which tells me nothing. Snell is a tall, athletic wing who can play big at guard or quick at forward. Murphy is 6-foot-9 and can shoot. But what does this mean?

When asked about the new players, Bulls coach Tom Thibodeau talked about shooting.

"You can never have enough shooting," he told ESPN on Thursday. This is Thibodeau who said that, which is crazy. Everything my eyeballs have seen so far tells me this is a man who can never have enough defense. All he does all day long is scream about defense. He seems genuinely upset any time an opposing team scores its first two points. "That wasn't supposed to happen," is what I imagine he's screaming at his players, "you bums need to try harder."

Analysts are talking about the Bulls using these picks to "space the floor" with "length" on "catch-and-shoots" with "wingspan." I think these are all fancy codes for "We plan to just stand around and get out of Derrick Rose's way, jack shots from the perimeter and let Joakim Noah get the rebound if we miss, then turn around and mush the opposition into our armpits on defense."

With possible sidebars of Luol Deng being up for grabs and the possible amnesty-clause release of Carlos Boozer if either of the new players offers some positional redundancy. But I don't know what next year's team will look like or what general manager Gar Forman will do in free agency. Nobody does. Probably not even Gar Forman.

The Bulls have options. They are nothing but options right now. After going deeper in the playoffs than seemed possible with a banged-up crew of replacement warriors, they now have the benefit of a deep bench of fungible players with the highest possible trade value. It seems like an opportune time to make waves.

Or stand pat because these guys did so well without Rose or Deng or Kirk Hinrich. Or maybe add some shooting because apparently you can never have enough. I don't know. My head hurts.

ESPYs bring The Heat

Melissa McCarthy tops the ESPY Awards' wish list for future hosts. "I would love to see a woman take on the show," executive producer Maura Mandt told thr.com. Maybe they'll use an idea from McCarthy's "Bridesmaids" character: "Female fight club. We grease up and ... surprise! Beat the crap outta her."

THE MOUTHWATCH

“We don't have a voice, and I really believe the reason that we don't have a voice is that they're hoping that if we keep dying off at the rate we are, we'll be all dead and they won't have to worry about anything.”

—Retired Green Bay Packers tight end Gary Knefelc, in an interview with NBC25-TV. He said he believes the NFL and its players' association are unwilling to help players who retired before 1970.

Justin Timberlake & Jay-Z

July 22 at Soldier Field

The A-list pals conjured images of a modern Rat Pack when they donned tuxedos for a Grammy performance earlier this year, and they'll likely bring the same champagne-and-caviar feel to this stadium gig.

Blazing!

The top 25 concerts on July's sizzling schedule

By Andy Downing | FOR REDEYE

Everything about Chicago's July concert scene is massive. There are giant festivals (Taste of Chicago! Pitchfork!), giant names (Beyoncé! Pearl Jam! Jay-Z!) and even a couple of artists (St. Vincent and David Byrne!) touring behind an album, "Love This Giant," that could serve as a slogan for this epic summer stretch. Here are 25 of the best shows hitting the city this month.

Wavefront Music Festival

Friday-Sunday at Montrose Beach

The electronic dance music festival returns to Montrose Beach for another go-round with headliners like Diplo, Fatboy Slim and former LCD Soundsystem frontman James Murphy manning the decks.

Deafheaven

Saturday at Subterranean

"Sunbather," the latest album from the atmospheric metal crew, veers between dreamy passages and explosions of city-pulverizing noise that play like an alternate soundtrack to the destructive final battle between Superman and General Zod in "Man of Steel."

David Byrne & St. Vincent

Saturday at Ravinia Festival

The arty duo, backed for performances by a small army of musicians, draws heavily on New Orleans-style funk in its ongoing collaboration.

Dawes

Monday at Pritzker Pavilion

The rootsy crew's third album,

"Stories Don't End," calls to mind the laid-back folk-rock of fellow Californians like the Eagles and Jackson Browne.

Justin Bieber

July 9 at United Center

The Biebs, who in recent months has become better known for his appearances on gossip sites like TMZ than for his music, has struggled in his transition from teen icon to full-fledged adult pop star.

Taste of Chicago

July 10-14 at Grant Park

The annual downtown event offers a little something for everyone,

Bruno Mars

July 13 at United Center

The retro crooner adopts a throwback approach in everything from his musical cues (seamlessly well-crafted soul and R&B) to his onstage wardrobe (note the trademark fedora).

Beyoncé

July 17 at United Center

The R&B superstar rarely misses a beat in her uber-precise concerts, which somehow manage to balance grandiose arena spectacle with more surprising moments of intimacy.

with must-see sets from a modern R&B crooner (Robin Thicke), a veteran rocker (Robert Plant) and a rafter-rattling soul belter (Jill Scott).

Kurt Vile & the Violators

July 11 at Metro

"There comes a time in every man's life," sings Vile atop a rolling mist of guitar on his latest album, "Walkin on a Pretty Daze." "When he's gotta take a hold of the hand that isn't his." That time is now for the perpetually stoned-sounding Philadelphia native, who embraces a more mature approach on this career-best effort.

Dan Deacon

July 11 at Pritzker Pavilion

Though Deacon's latest album "America" is in many ways his bleakest effort to date (lyrics depict the country as a post-apocalyptic wasteland), his live shows remain joyous, high-energy affairs.

Bob Dylan, Wilco and My Morning Jacket

July 12 at Toyota Park

Though the trio of artists on this monster bill span several generations, all are commercially and critically successful acts comfortable dabbling in everything from acoustic folk to winding electric guitar jams.

One Direction

July 13-14 at First Midwest Bank Amphitheatre

Over the course of two albums, the British boy band has amassed an army of teenage followers with thorn-free pop songs about the simple pleasures of puppy love.

Fatoumata Diawara

July 15 at Pritzker Pavilion

The Malian musician also is an accomplished actress, and she brings a level of on-screen gravitas to her graceful live performances.

Future Bible Heroes

July 17 at Lincoln Hall

Sad-sack singer-songwriter Stephin Merritt (the Magnetic Fields) flaunts a more upbeat side in this disco-leaning side project, which appears here in support of the aptly titled "Partygoing."

Courtney Love

July 18 at House of Blues

Though lately she's garnered more attention for her offstage antics than her music (Love's most recent album, "Nobody's Daughter," surfaced way back in 2010), reports from a

January concert at the Sundance Film Festival suggest the former Hole frontwoman has regained her footing.

Pearl Jam

July 19 at Wrigley Field

Frontman Eddie Vedder—long a vocal supporter of the North Siders—gets to fulfill every Cubs fan's lifelong dream when he takes the field at Wrigley with his Pearl Jam mates.

Phish

July 19-21 at Charter One Pavilion

The jam-scene vets bring their improvisational stylings to the newly expanded coastal venue.

Pitchfork Music Festival

July 19-21 at Union Park

The annual fest put on by the tastemaking website brings together big names (Bjork, R. Kelly) and a wealth of buzzworthy up-and-comers like Savages, Waxahatchee and METZ.

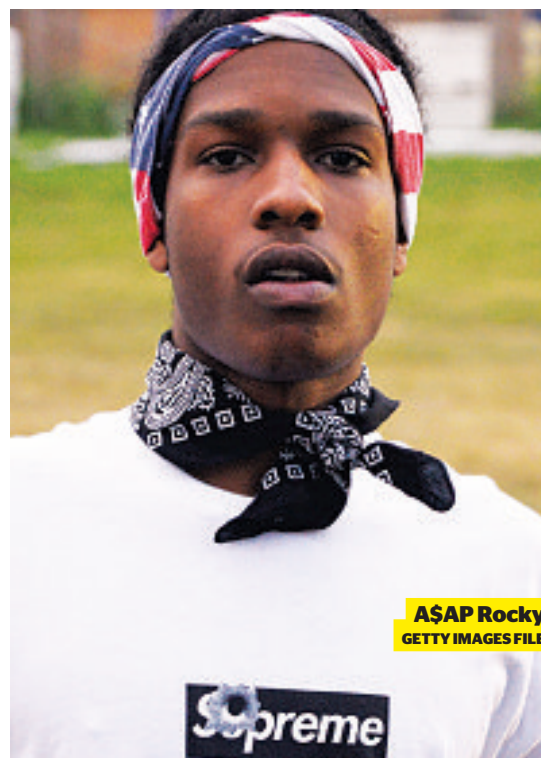

Kelly Clarkson and Jason Aldean

July 20 at Wrigley Field

While Clarkson has flirted with

Wilco

A$AP Rocky

country in the past—even performing a duet with current tourmate Aldean at the 2010 Country Music Awards—the "Idol" champ embraces the genre with arms wide open on her latest single, "Tie It Up."

Bosnian Rainbows

July 24 at Bottom Lounge

This promising new collaboration combines the talents of former At the Drive-In/Mars Volta leader Omar Rodriguez Lopez and Le Butcherettes frontwoman/force of nature Teri Gender Bender.

Mark Mulcahy

July 25 at Hideout

The former Miracle Legion frontman long has been celebrated by his musical peers, many of whom (Thom Yorke, the National, Michael Stipe, etc.) appeared on a benefit album recorded for his late wife, Melissa, who died in 2008.

Kurt Vile

Mastodon

July 27 at First Midwest Bank Amphitheatre

After releasing three increasingly complex concept albums, the Atlanta metalheads stripped things back for "The Hunter," a record as primal and focused as its title suggests.

Dessa

July 29 at Pritzker Pavilion

The Minneapolis rapper, who performs here in support of her latest album "Parts of Speech," specializes in heartfelt songs that explore the various ways human beings connect.

Wiz Khalifa and A$AP Rocky

July 30 at First Midwest Bank Amphitheatre

This powerhouse hip-hop bill, headlined by noted weed-rapper Wiz Khalifa, could double as a traveling contact high.

Los Angeles Times

Weddings and music: It's a topic that thousands of couples will ponder this summer. Their decisions will affect many more, whether they're enduring a mediocre cover band in a Holiday Inn conference room or sitting peacefully outside with a string quartet or a solo pianist.

How music is presented can be the difference between a joyous celebration or a funeral exercise in cliché.

To possibly save you from struggling to choose the perfect music for your wedding, we provide the list of (mostly) love songs Randall Roberts, pop music critic for the Los Angeles Times, chose for his recent nuptials. Maybe it will give you some ideas. Good luck and congratulations.

CIARA AND NICKI SHOW US THEIR FIERCE FACES—AND OUTFITS

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Don't put down your pick for Song of Summer too soon. At the BET Awards on Sunday night, Ciara and Nicki Minaj debuted the video for their new song, "I'm Out"—and it's a serious contender. Dedicated to newly single ladies, the track mostly follows Ciara through the club and some spacey situations. Join us for a fashion tour through the duo's world. DMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | REDEYEDANA

Grill Well damn. There's no question about what kind of day THIS is going to be.

Blue snakeskin track suit and hat Spoiler alert: This turns out to be a skirt, which we're much less into.

Space suits I'm really curious where Nicki got a bodysuit that's entirely fishnet except for the ass and boobs. But really, it fits her personality. Ciara's is slightly less revealing, and these really are the best looks of the video, even if they are VERY inspired by Michael Jackson's "Scream."

Hat/mesh tank top Paris: Usually for lovers, this time for dancers.

White tennis skirt and top Are we... having a weekend at the country club here? Judging by the lace-up gladiator sandals, probably not. The outfit stands out well from her dancers though, and is definitely complimented by all the flying money.

Goldfish Hey dude.

Fashion show ZEBRA BOOTS. Still not better than the shiny shoes, but nothing says confidence on the runway more than knee-high safari gear.

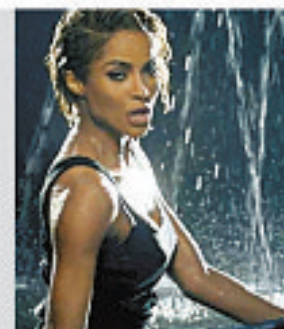

Shiny shoes Actually, forget what we said about the bodysuits. THESE are the best part of this video.

Twerk suit This was pretty confusing in a prizefighter-y, potentially newspaper-print way. But then we saw a guy booty dancing in a kilt and forgot all our worries.

Wet tank top BTW, this is a reminder of what you WON'T be getting anymore, ex-boyfriend. The best revenge is looking amazing.

BEER. BOATS. BANDS.

'AD' sing-along

Admit it: Your morning commute would be better if you could listen to "You're a Crook, Captain Hook" on the Red Line. David Schwartz, who composed the music for all four seasons of "Arrested Development," announced that his team is working on a full-length soundtrack album, tvguide.com reports. It will be available on iTunes and maybe even vinyl; let's just hope they include Franklin's classic "It Ain't Easy Being White."

No sweat

Remember Ruben Studdard? The former "American Idol" champion is coming back ... as a contestant on "The Biggest Loser." Studdard will be the first celebrity to compete on the show, the Los Angeles Times reports. Studdard—in case you've forgotten—won Season 2 of "Idol" in 2003.

Outta there

So long, Fred Armisen. After 11 seasons, the comedian is following Bill Hader and Seth Meyers out the door at "Saturday Night Live," thr.com reports. IFC recently renewed Armisen's sketch series "Portlandia" for another two seasons, so you'll still see him putting birds on it.

GETTING HELP

From the sad but predictable department: Farrah Abraham has checked into an outpatient rehab program in Florida, she told radaronline.com. The "Teen Mom"-slash-porn star was arrested in March for DUI. "I'm 22 and I want to make better choices and ensure I can recognize when I am putting myself in a bad situation next time," Abraham said.

$50 MILLION

That's how much "Despicable Me 2" pulled in over the weekend from seven overseas markets, including the U.K., France and Australia, deadline.com reports. It opens Wednesday in the U.S.
